

CASA Dean's MMU (Monday Morning Update)

Monday, February 6, 2017

Dear Colleagues,

With the executive order issued by President Trump barring admission to the United States of Syrian refugees and imposing a 90-day ban on all immigrant and nonimmigrant entry from seven Muslim-majority nations, U.S. colleges could lose up to $700 million in revenue per year if this immigration ban becomes permanent, according to a report released last week by College Factual, a higher education forum. The figure comes from student visa data and depends on whether international students pay the full price of tuition and fees. Almost 16,000 students who attend U.S. colleges and universities come from countries affected by the immigration ban. Leaders of several U.S. universities have spoken out to oppose the ban. SIU Interim Chancellor Brad Colwell wrote to the campus community and encouraged all students, faculty and staff to support and respect our international students in these uncertain times. The SIU International Festival 2017 is this week. Let us show support for our international students, celebrating the diversity, inclusiveness and cultures represented at SIU and in the region during this festival. Today, there is a Parade of Flags event starting at 9:45am in Woody Hall, across the campus, and arriving at the Student Center. Interim Chancellor Colwell will officially open the festival at 10:30am in the Student Center International Lounge.

MACHINE VS HUMAN: 60:0

AlphaGo is a computer program developed by the Google DeepMind team to play the board game Go. In March 2016, AlphaGo beat a 9-dan professional, Lee Sedol, 4:1 without handicaps. As of January 5, 2017, AlphaGo's online record was 60 wins and 0 losses, including three victories over Go's top ranked players in China and South Korea, with many world champions.

The sweeping victory of machine over human players indicates the great potential of artificial intelligence. Combined with natural language processing, deep learning will change a lot of our daily practice in higher education in the future. AI Magazine published a paper in 2013, "AI Grand Challenges for Education" by Beverly Woolf, et. al., summarized the following "grand challenges":

- Virtual mentors for every learner: Omnipresent support that integrates user modeling, social simulation and knowledge representation.
- Addressing 21st century skills: Assist learners with self-direction, self-assessment, teamwork and more.
- Analysis of interaction data: Bring together the vast amounts of data about individual learning, social contexts, learning contexts and personal interests.
- Provide opportunities for global classrooms: Increase the interconnectedness and accessibility of classrooms worldwide.
- Lifelong and lifewide technologies: Taking learning outside of the classroom and into the learner's life outside of school.

The success of AlphaGo gives us more confidence in applications of artificial intelligence, addressing the challenges listed above.

SCHOLARSHIP INTERVIEW

More than 350 high-achieving high school students and their family members were on campus last weekend for the Chancellor's and University Excellence Scholarship Interview Weekend. All of these students have already been admitted to the University. SIU will award 25 Chancellor's Scholarships, which cover tuition, fees and room and board for four years, and a larger number of University Excellence Scholarships, which is an $8,500 award for four years.

Below are a few photos taken at Friday's College Showcase and Saturday at the Student Center with the Flying Salukis. Great weekend getting to meet our Scholars and their families.

- OR: Oregon Senate introduced a bill that would allow Oregon community colleges and public universities to voluntarily merge, with a potential for institutional savings, as well as the ease and possible personal savings for students moving across the state higher education system.
- GA: After consolidating 12 campuses statewide in the last few years, Georgia Board of Regents recently approved a merger between Georgia Southern University and Armstrong State University. The combined institution will have more than 27,000 students.
